

Program of INCA EXPO Includes Noted Speakers

Group to Fete 10th Anniversary Dec. 16-18

Congressman F. Edward Hebert, a Congressional Medal of Honor winner and nationally known businessman Patrick J. Frawley Jr. will be among the speakers here at INCA EXPO Dec. 16-18 in Audubon Park.

Purposes of INCA EXPO are to celebrate the Information Council of the Americas' 10th anniversary and to call attention to its activities.

INCA, founded by Dr. Alton Ochsner and several other New Orleanians, is a non-profit organization aimed at promoting the free enterprise system and exposing Communist activities in the Americas.

There will be exhibits, showing of documentary films and talks by about 20 speakers at INCA EXPO.

It will be conducted in the Audubon Park Tea Room noon to 5 p.m. Thursday through Saturday. In addition, night hours will be 7-10 p.m. on Thursday and Friday.

INCA EXPO will be open to the public and there will be no admission charge.

"Our idea is to call to the attention of the people in New Orleans and the world what INCA is doing," said Dr. Ochsner at a meeting Friday in International House.

He noted that INCA, through its "truth tapes" broadcast over radio, "was successful in 1963 in preventing a Communist takeover of Venezuela. Ninety-seven per cent of the electorate turned out and the Communists were soundly beaten."

The election of Socialist Salvador Allende Gossens as Chilean President was prevented in 1964 by INCA, Dr. Ochsner asserted.

Allende was elected President last year, but Dr. Ochsner said INCA at the time had its attention and money directed against campus unrest in the United States.

INCA's radio propaganda efforts have been described as comparable to those of Radio Free Europe.

Hebert will speak at 2 p.m. Saturday in "A Salute to the Military" program.

Marine PFC Raymond "Mike" Clausen Jr. of Hammond, a Medal of Honor winner, will speak about Vietnam at 9 p.m. Friday.

Frawley, former board chairman of the Eversharp, Schick and Technicolor Corps., will speak at 8 p.m. Thursday on "This Land is Our Land."

Dr. Ochsner, noting that INCA receives no U.S. government money, said INCA can do its job more effectively than the government, which is often accused in Latin American of being "imperialistic."
